Facing the Future, Facing the Screen, VLC10

10th Budapest Visual Learning Conference

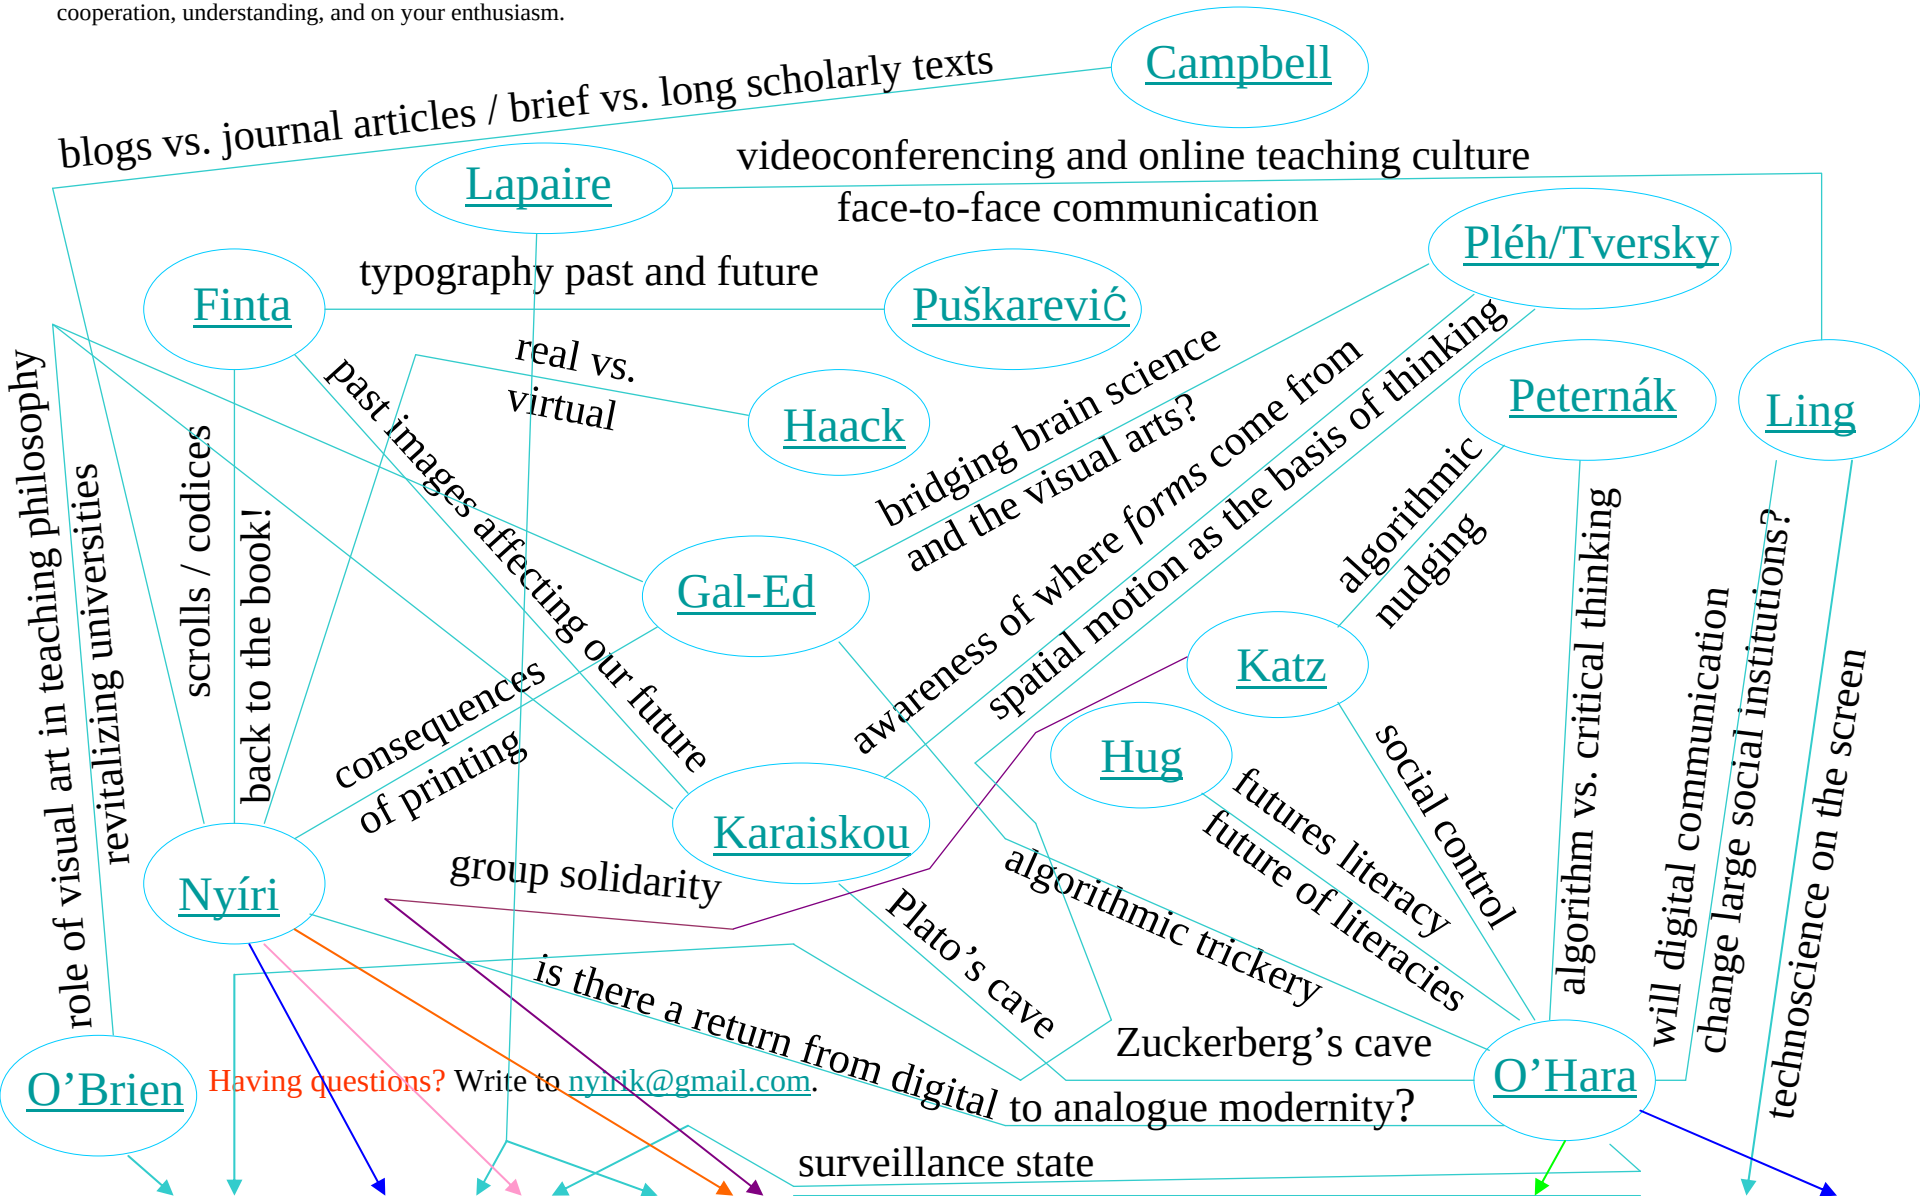
VLC9 website

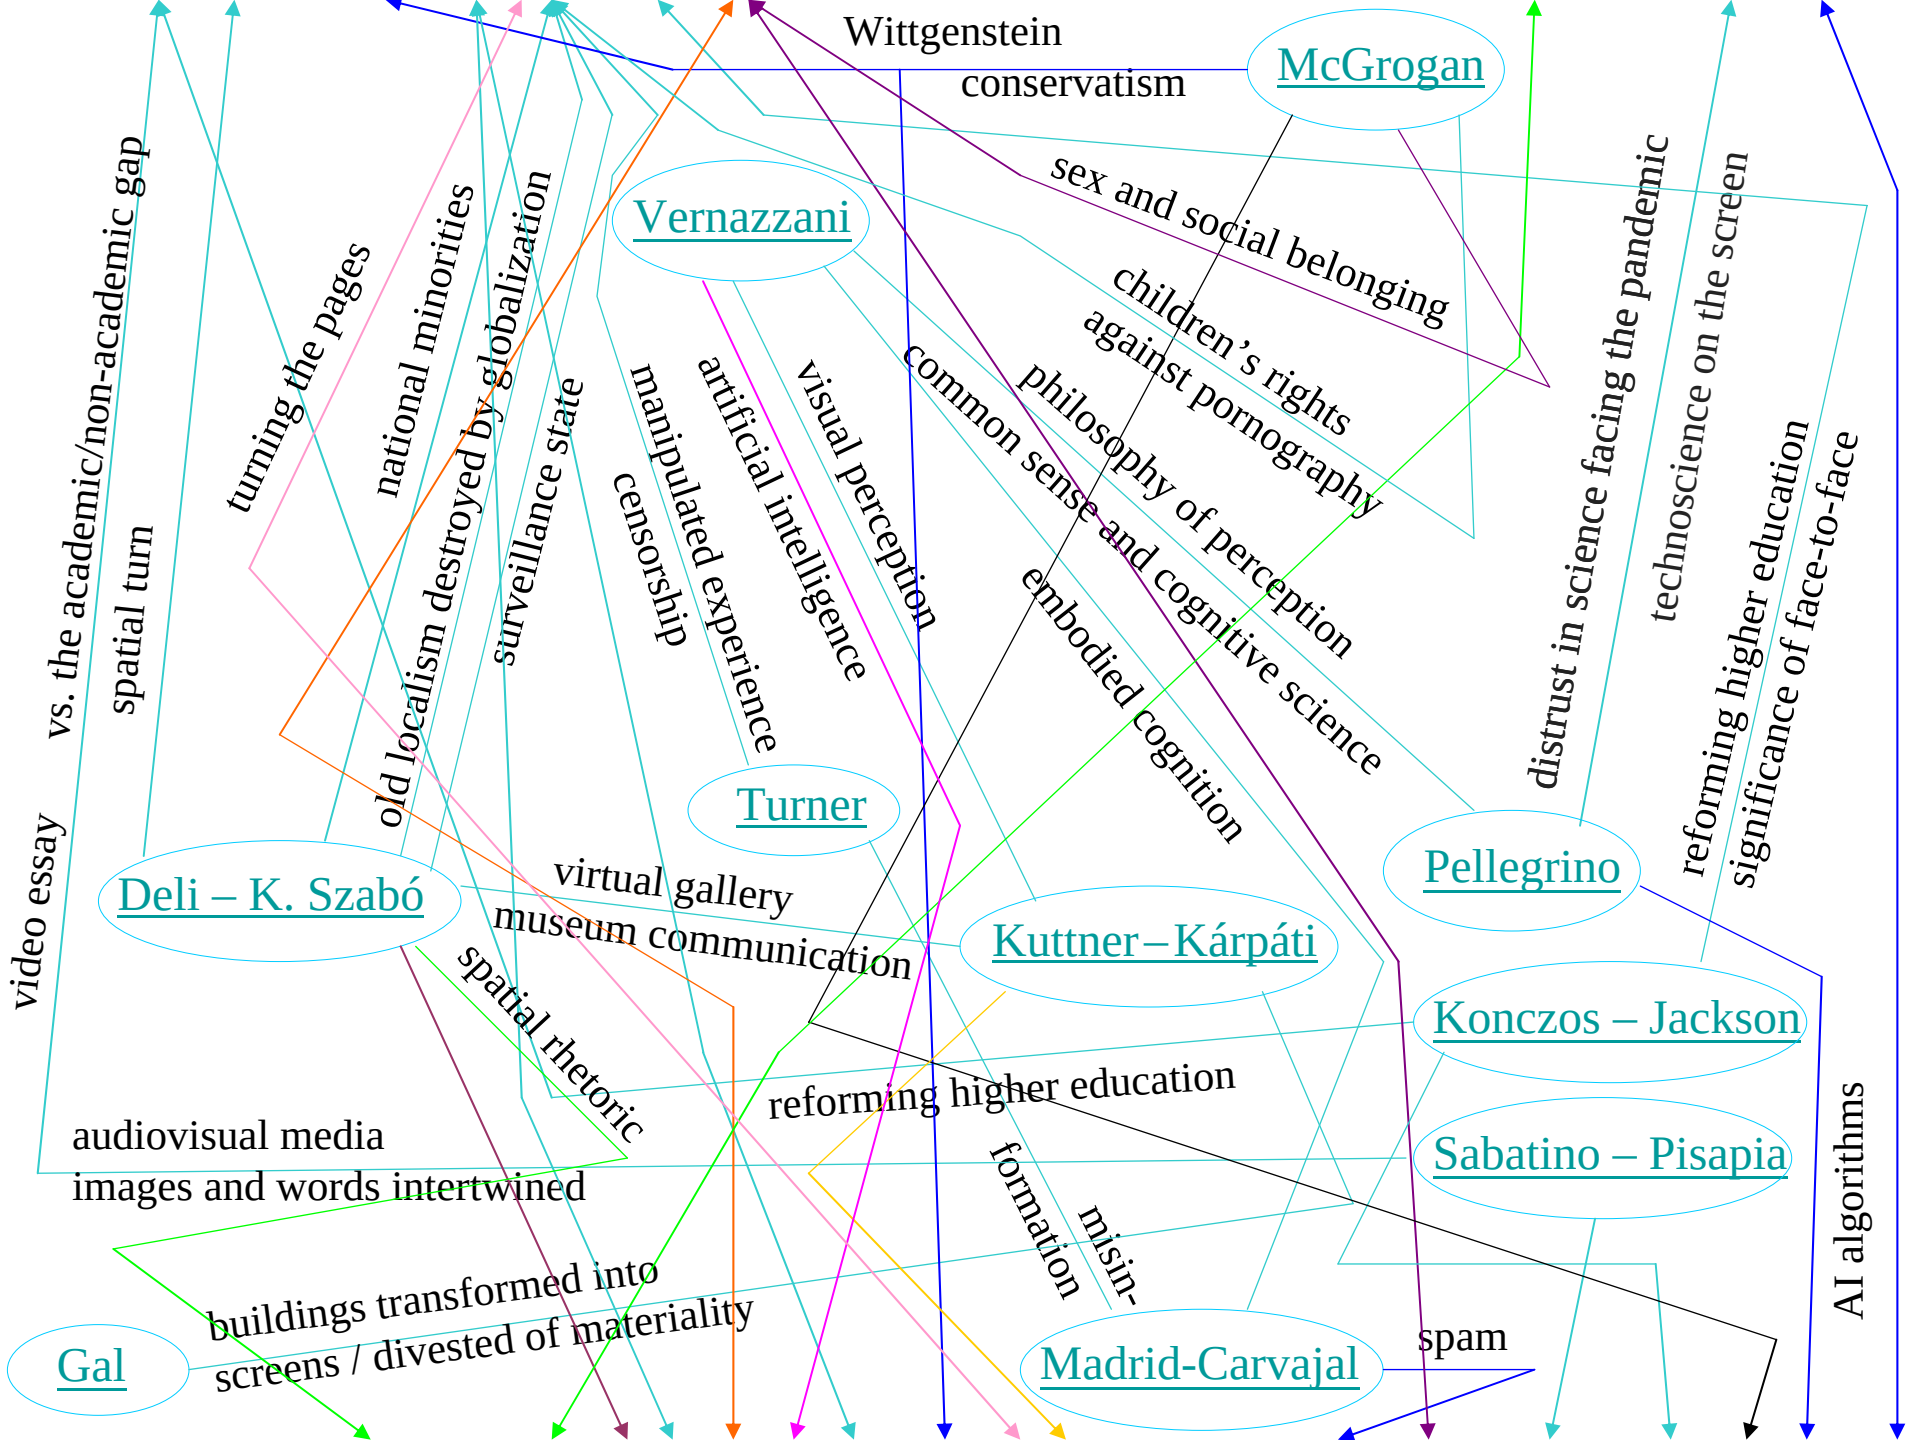
VLC9 online volume

This network (compare also the VLC9 website) aims to serve pre-conference discussions. As we have realized in the course of the past two years or so, online conferences only work if they in the main happen before they actually happen. We rely on your cooperation, understanding, and on your enthusiasm.

Network of topics

Stand Dec. 27, 2022





Wittgenstein
conservatism
McGrogan
sex and social belonging children's rights
against pornography
philosophy of perception common sense and cognitive science embodied cognition
distrust in science facing the pandemic technoscience on the screen reforming higher education significance of face-to-face Vernazzani
visual perception
artificial intelligence
manipulated experience
censorship
surveillance state
old localism destroyed by globalization national minorities
turning the pages
spatial turn
vs. the academic/non-academic gap video essay
Turner
Pellegrino
Deli – K. Szabó
virtual gallery
museum communication
Kuttner–Kárpáti
spatial rhetoric
Konczos – Jackson
reforming higher education
audiovisual media
images and words intertwined Sabatino – Pisapia
misin-
formation
AI algorithms
buildings transformed into screens / divested of materiality Gal
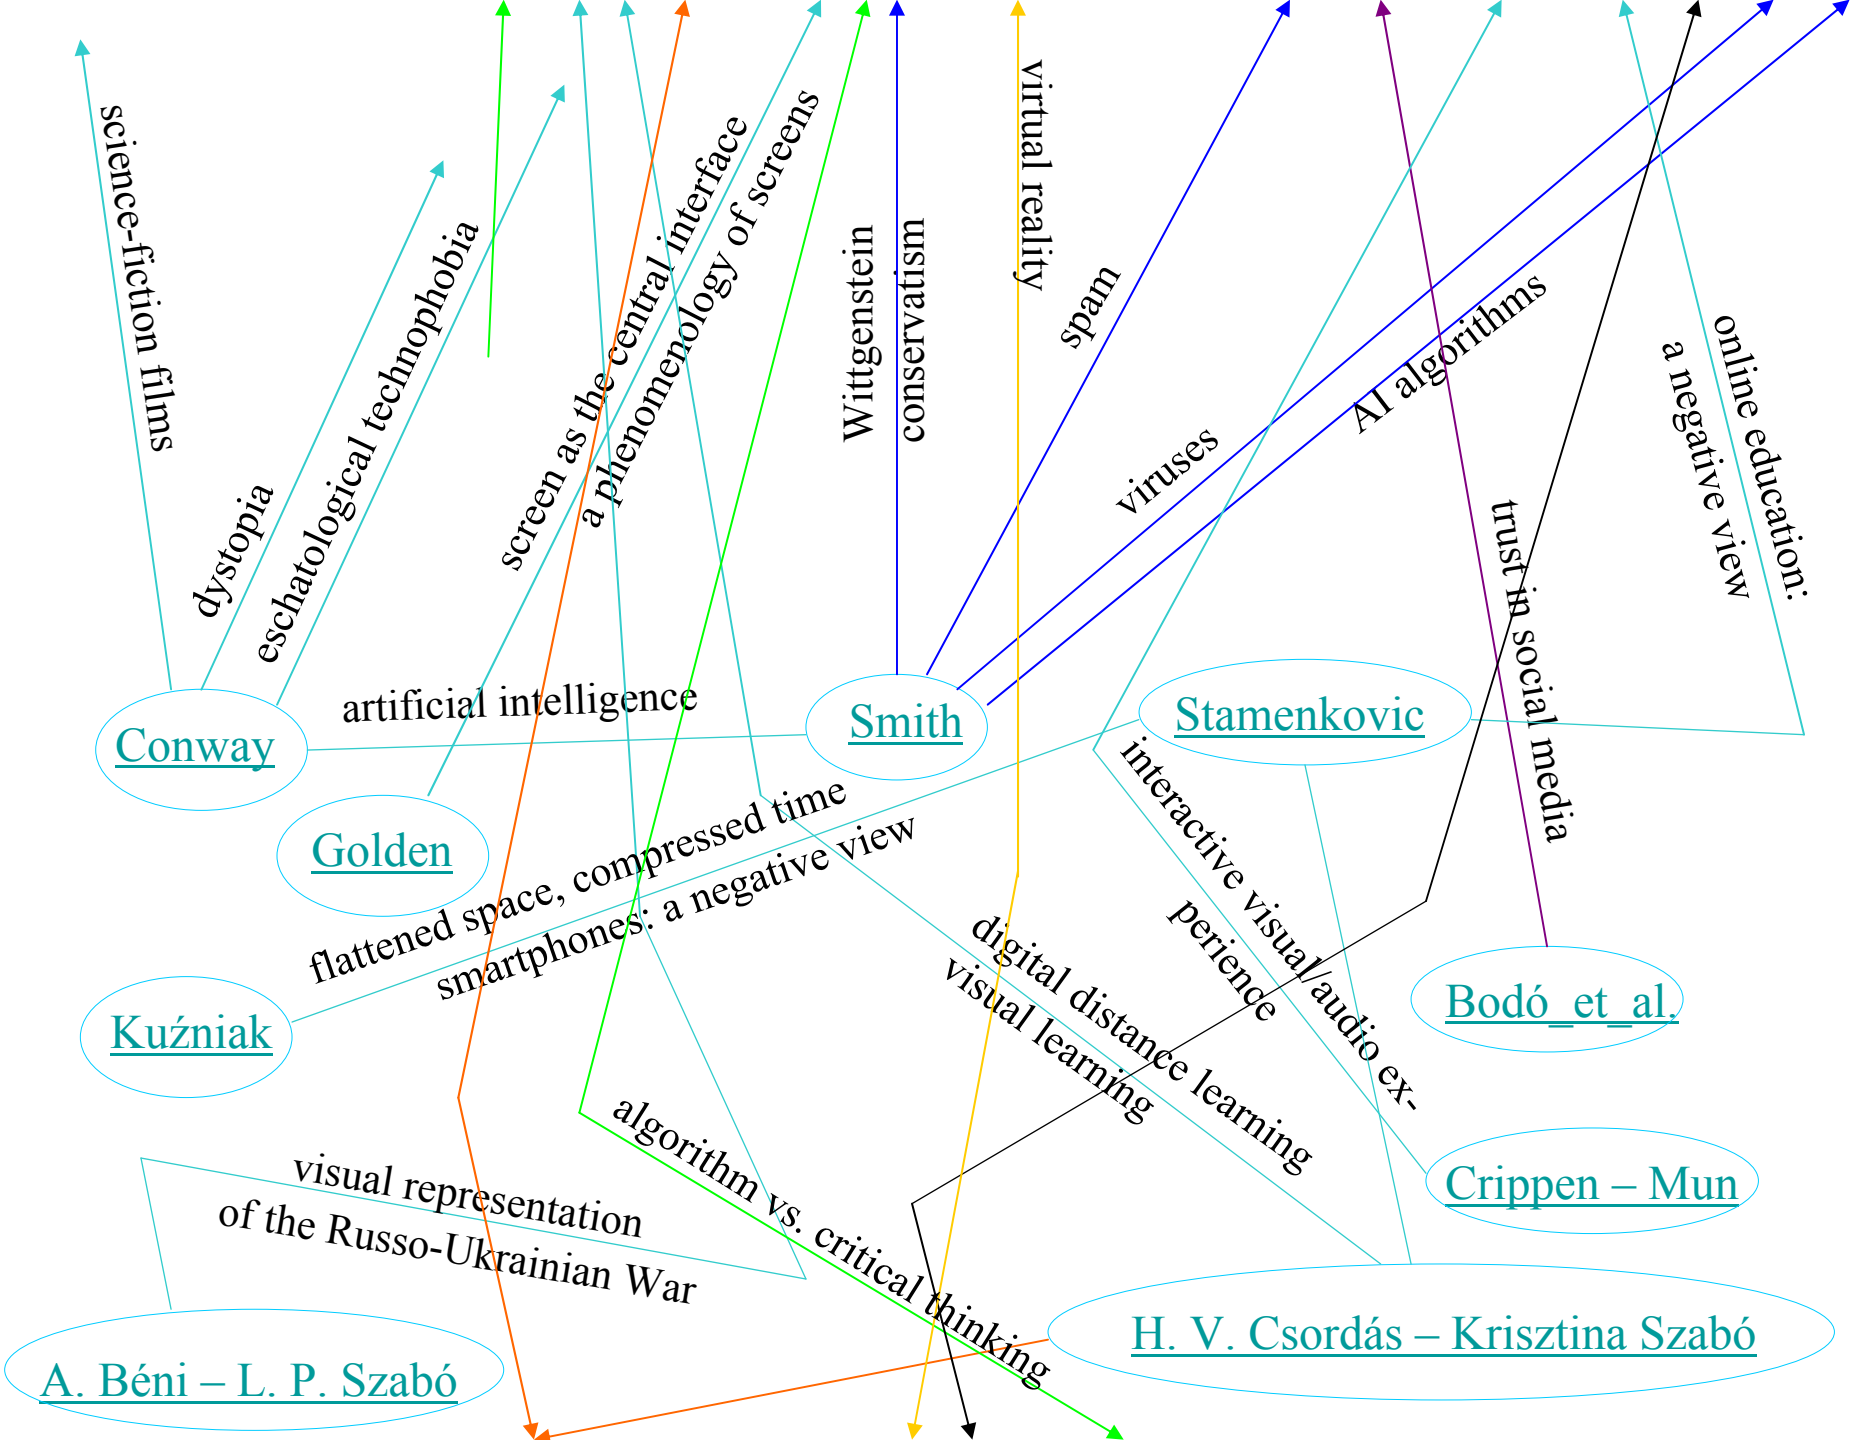
Madrid-Carvajal
spam



science-fiction films
dystopia
eschatological technophobia screen as the central interface a phenomenology of screens Wittgenstein
conservatism
virtual reality
spam
viruses
AI algorithms
online education:
a negative view
trust in social media
artificial intelligence
Conway
Golden
Smith
Stamenkovic
Kuźniak
flattened space, compressed time smartphones: a negative view interactive visual/audio experience
digital distance learning visual learning
Bodó_et_al.
Crippen – Mun
algorithm vs. critical thinking
visual representation of the Russo-Ukrainian War
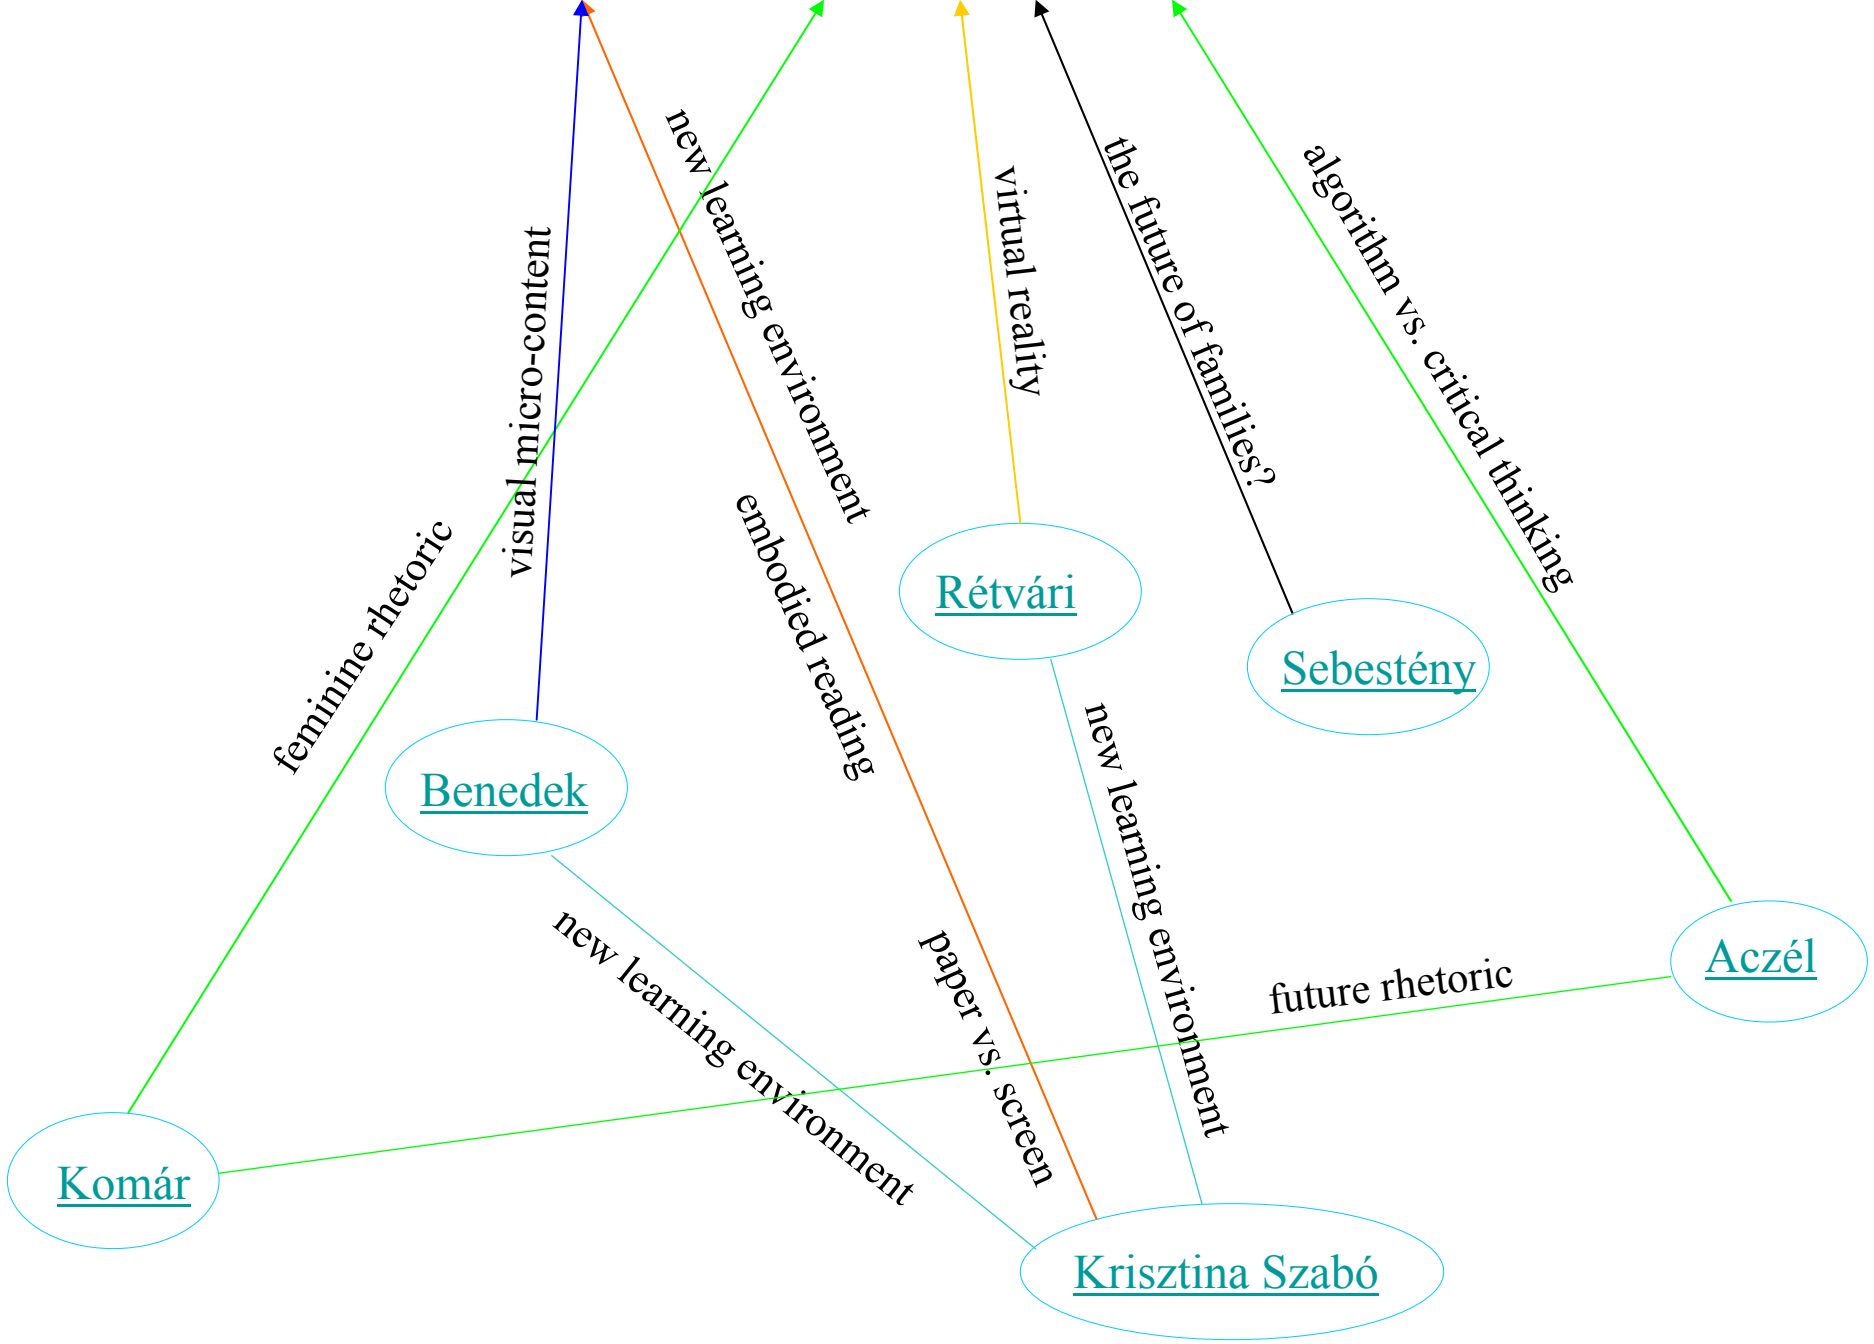
A. Béni – L. P. Szabó
H. V. Csordás – Krisztina Szabó



Komár
Benedek
Rétvári
Sebestény
Aczél
Krisztina Szabó
feminine rhetoric
visual micro-content
new learning environment
embodied reading
virtual reality
the future of families?
algorithm vs. critical thinking
new learning environment
paper vs. screen
new learning environment
future rhetoric